and nothing kills credit sooner than the knowledge in any bank board that a man engages in speculation. How can a man be credited whose resources may be swept away in one hour by a panic among gamesters? Resolve to be business men, but speculators never.

The third danger is the perilous habit of indorsing notes. It appeals to your generous instincts, and you say: "How can I refuse to lend my name only, to assist a friend?" It is because there is so much that is true and commendable in that view that the practice is so dangerous. If you owe any thing, all your capital and all your effects are a solemn trust in your hands to be held inviolate for the security of those who have trusted you. When a man in debt indorses for another, it is not his own credit or his own capital that he risks, it is the money of his own creditors. MILITARY DUELS.

How They Are Conducted in Some of the Crack Regiments of France. The death of a young soldier of the Sixteenth Dragoons from wounds received in a duel has led to a lively discussion in the French papers on the practice of dueling in the army. On it appears, duels are rare, owing to the occurrence. In the cavalry regiments especially this practice flourishes. long as they do not come to blows, they need not fight unless they wish to: parties interested, asks permission from the Colonel for the rencontre, and the latter nine times out of ten grants it. HOME AND FARM.

-The white of two eggs will render the deadly corrosive sublimate as harmless as a dose of calomel.

-What you impress upon a child's heart by word or example, good or bad, is like writing on glass with a diamond-it is ineffaceable.

-Cooked rutabagas with a little meal or bran will make admirable pork. Fed to sheep, with a trifling addition of feed, and they will make the finest mutton.

-Stock fields are questionable property. The loss of manure, tramping of the fields and the exposure of the stock hardly pays for the amount of feed secured.

-Too much washing and scouring of churn and tin-pans can not be given. Cleanliness is an important factor in the dairy business, and boiling water is an absolute necessity.

-A good average dairy cow ought to give at least four thousand pounds of milk in a year, which should return the farmer, whether sold or made into butter and cheese, at least a cent a pound, so that such cows ought to bring in at least forty dollars a year per head.

-Poverty Pie: One large cup of milk, velk of one egg, two tablespoons each of sugar and flour, a little salt. Cook all together by setting the dish in a pan of boiling water; stir until scalded, cool and flavor with lemon; frost with the white of the egg and two tablespoons of sugar. Have the crust ready baked.

-It is better to sow Hungarian grass so as to have it thick. Five pecks of seed per acre may be used. If a smaller proportion of seed be sown the stalks may be rather coarse. Being a gross feeder, and shading the ground well, it kills weeds, and is assisted in so doing also by frequent mowing.

-Oyster Cakes: One solid pint of oysters chopped fine, enough powdered cracker to stiffen sufficiently to mold into very soft cakes, salt and pepper. A beaten egg is an improvement, although not necessary. These may be prepared the day before, and should be fried in a little hot butter or dripor lemon juice squeezed over. This is an economical oyster dish.-N. Y. Ob-

COOKING STOCK FOOD.

An Old Farmer Pronounces It Expensive

and Unprofitable. We notice in an exchange (agricultural) that a few fancy writers, who are instructing farmers what to do, and how to do, are urging them to cook the food for their stock. Twenty-five years ago manufacturers of food-steamers, by the aid of cheap writers for agricultural papers, induced the farmers to purchase steamers for cooking food for their stock. The evidence paraded seemed to be conclusive, and the writer of this paragraph, then extensively engaged in cattle-raising, began to think he was behind the times. But a neighbor having purchased a steamer, we concluded to await developments. In the cold and bleak out-door position of the steamer, it took men with considerable cheek to attend to the steamer. It took considerable fuel and made heavy drafts on the stock well for water. Cook food during the day, it would freeze up solid during the night. So it took nearly half of the day to thaw it out before the stock could be fed. Then it was found necessary to build a house for the steamer, and a warm one, and it had to be some distance from the corn-crib, and from barn and stock sheds, to avoid danger from fire. This made every thing inconvenient. A few months of faithful trial satisfied the most careful energetic feeder. Next year the steamer stood idle. The second year it was set out at the side of the barnyard fence; and finally sold to the man who ranges the country for rags, old copper and old iron.

But separate from the trouble of managing the steamer the most caretests by scientific men, where they have all the appliances for the purpose without regard to the cost, prove that it will not pay farmers to cook the food for their stock. And our advice is, let the steamers alone, and spend any surplus means in providing warmer winter quarters, better places for feeding, and ample devices by the variety in the stock to get out of the food all there is in it. For such animals as do not at first masticate their food, but which ruminate it, mix invariably some coarse food with their grain, so that it will be more thoroughly masticated by being brought back with the hay, straw or other coarse stock, and thus it will be easier and cheaper in feeding, and nearly as much growth of flesh, fat, bone and muscle will be derived from raw grain as cooked, and far more profit. The food steamer on the ordinary stock farms is a nuisance—expensive, troublesome and unprofitable.-Iowa State Register.
